

SUMMARY

---

Congratulations! You now have a road map (see the next page) to understand your options when thinking about buying a manufactured home — one of the largest and most significant purchases you will ever make. You have become familiar with many of the aspects involved in buying and owning a manufactured home, whether sited or unsited. You learned things that are important for any first-time homebuyer: selecting the right home, negotiating for a reasonable price and finding the best financing. You also examined things that are unique to the manufactured home purchase process: site placement options and home installation. Good luck in choosing the path that is right for you.
